Hugh Marshall has a general and varied practice with an emphasis on commercial litigation. For eight years, he served as an Assistant Attorney General of the State of Missouri. He has extensive experience in appellate practice, criminal law, mental health law, and administrative law.

Mr. Marshall represents businesses of all sizes in state and federal trial and appellate courts in commercial disputes involving contract, landlord-tenant, construction, real estate, mechanic's lien, bond, business tort, and collection matters; represents businesses and individuals in state and federal trial and appellate courts and administrative tribunals in contract and tort matters, professional negligence, defamation, probate litigation, nursing home compliance, and mental health matters.

Mr. Marshall also represents nursing homes in regulatory compliance and patients' rights matters, assistance to clients in navigating the public assistance maze, and representation in general jurisdiction and probate courts to maximize cash flow from private and public sources.

Mr. Marshall has developed a unique practice in assisting landowners to minimize their real estate tax liability.
